Schneider's fleet, supporting the company's responsible operations and reliable service for customers.

"These milestones represent thousands of decisions made the right way," said Schneider President and CEO Mark Rourke. "We celebrate the accomplishments of these award-earning professionals whose experience, determination and skill help push our safety performance forward."

Schneider is committed to helping its associates and the industry operate more safely. The company's hands-on onboarding, safety analytics and innovative virtual reality tools help prepare drivers to handle challenging scenarios with confidence. Additionally, Schneider equips trucks with features like collision mitigation sensors, speed limiters, side guard assist for blind spots and lane departure warnings. Taken together, these technological innovations can help improve safety for drivers and those with whom they share the road.

Schneider's approach reflects what drivers value most, a company that equips them to help do the job the right way and lives up to the promises it makes. It also supports shippers' need for reliable service, helping ensure freight is delivered on time and supply chains continue moving.

Schneider drivers stay for decades and can achieve these milestones because of the mentorship and support fostered at the company. This year, the transportation leader proudly recognizes the outstanding drivers who have helped keep the roads safe and inspire others:

- 85 drivers received the Consecutive Safe Driving Award, celebrating 10 or more consecutive years without a preventable accident or significant lost-time injury.
- Ira Kelley was recognized for achieving 40 years of consecutive safe driving in 2025, following his accomplishment in 2022 of reaching 4 million safe miles without a preventable accident.
